Skin focus: hydration, antiredness, calming, exfoliating

Comforting Redness Reducer, TRUE Cosmetics

One of my biggest skin

Enspro Ceramide Skin Essence, Kintech USA

I must confess, when I first went to try this rich hydrating facial moisturizer and a little at its baby oil-like consistency, but my dry skin drank it up within minutes and I looked so much more plump, fresh and smooth, with no greasy residue. One quick pump is more than enough for my face and neck. It took great and be primed for morning application of sunscreen. Another confession: The packaging also had a great feel. I was expecting this to be a cream!

Sweet Sugar & Shea Hydrating Body Polish, Bath by Bettijo

There's no denying that I have a sweet tooth. Perhaps that's why I love sugar scrubs, and this product's delicious name alone was enough to hint that this scrub could be perfect for me. My experience with it confirmed it. Unlike other scrubs that are suspended in oil and end up feeling too slippery to exfoliate, this one was firm, gritty and easy to apply. Thanks to the combination of citrus oils and vitamins, my skin felt so soft and hydrated that I didn't even need to follow it with a body lotion!

...night. This shea butter- and jojoba-rich cream did the trick to nourish and hydrate my skin and leave it revitalized in the morning. On application, the cream felt cool and soothing, and the elegant white packaging really represents the richness of the product. ●
